Abram Himelstein

Abram Shalom Himelstein co-wrote and published Tales of a Punk Rock Nothing. He and co-author Jamie Schweser drove 25,000 miles selling the book on the street, in coffee shops, and outside concerts. Abram was arrested for selling the book outside of a Red Hot Chili Peppers concert; the ACLU defended him and had the charges dismissed. His latest book is What the Hell Am I Doing Here: The 100 T-shirt Project. Abram currently runs the Neighborhood Story Project–which pays New Orleans Public School students to write books about their block, and then celebrates book releases with block parties.

Acoustic Ross

Acoustic Ross is trying to prove that solo acoustic music need not be boring, quiet, or mellow. "A smart smart-aleck," according to the Tulsa World, he writes songs - equal parts folk, punk, and stand-up comedy (sometimes known as Anti-Folk)–which offer a subversive take on modern life. His self-released CDs (News From Around the Bend, The 918 UFN EP) have been compared to Tom Lehrer, Weird Al Yankovic - and even cartoonist Gahan Wilson. He is also the Executive Producer of Tulsa, Oklahoma's top-rated edition of Gimme the Mike!, an American Idol-style TV competition for local singers.

Amber Gayle

Amber Gayle, the writing half of Evil Twin Publications, explores human experience and relationships via her poetic, engaging zine-novels. Her faith in the artistic integrity of true experience has been affirmed by My Evil Twin Sister devotees. Reviewers have lauded her "finely crafted prose and flair for the poetic" (Willamette Week), and described her work as "eloquent, frighteningly personal" (Bitch Magazine). England's Bypass Magazine raved: "I wish more people would write like this... I felt really inspired and happy that I'd been let into someone else's life."

Jim Munroe

Jim Munroe is a "pop culture provocateur", according to BookSense.com. After the HarperCollins release of Flyboy Action Figure Comes With Gasmask (praised by people as diverse as Naomi Klein and Neil Gaiman) he chose to release his following books (Angry Young Spaceman, Everyone In Silico) on his own imprint No Media Kings as a statement against Murdoch-style consolidation. He's touring with his new novel An Opening Act of Unspeakable Evil, a tale of the urban occult made up entirely of blog entries.
